Richard Peterson is scheduled to play a show in Chehalis.

RICHARD PETERSON: Street Musician, Pianist, Composer to Play First Concert in Chehalis

By Carrina Stanton
For The Chronicle

After more than four decades of making music, Richard Peterson, 71, is having his first concert in his hometown.

When asked why he decided on now for this special show, in usual Peterson fashion he was fairly nonchalant about the whole thing.

"I don't make it down to Chehalis very often," Peterson said of his return to his hometown.

Well-known Northwest piano and trumpet player and composer, Peterson, has lived in Seattle since 1973. He gained much of his fame performing trumpet solos on the Seattle streets, most notably in front of the old Kingdome. His rise from obscurity was chronicled in his full-length feature film "Big City Dick" in 2004.

Born in 1948 in San Diego, his family moved to Chehalis when Peterson was still an infant. His first musical memories were the soundtracks from some of his favorite television shows as well as classic radio programming. He holds a great affinity radio "booth announcers" and still fondly recalls classic KELA personalities such as Dick Dawson, Bill Carter, Jim Knutson and Mike Fairhart.

"When I was a teen, I was interested to be a local radio personality," Peterson recalled.

Though Peterson never got to be on the radio in Chehalis, he did eventually get his wish as a regular personality on Seattle station KZOK for many years. But Southwest Washington was where Peterson first made his own music. He said he first received piano lessons while in a foster home in Longview as a child. When he returned to his family in Chehalis, he was able to continue piano lessons and his first song released to the public "Let's Take a Trip to Spokane" was composed in Chehalis in 1969. But she eventually quit piano lessons because he preferred learning music by ear.

"(Lessons) led into Classical music and that's not what I wanted to do," Peterson said. "I don't want to play Bach and Handel and Beethoven. You listen to Baroque music too long and you fall asleep. I like more modern music."

Peterson has been collecting old recordings of everything from soundtracks to sound effects for about forty years. Some of his favorites are music by Ziv and Columbia music production companies.

"I like the '50s and '60s. That music didn't stay on TV very many years," Peterson said. "That's the Golden Age of the sound."

He has released seven full length albums since 1982, the most recent of which is "Seven" released in 2019 by Olympia's Green Monkey Records. It was recorded by the "Richard Peterson Orchestra" which is basically Peterson playing piano, horns, synth oboe, bass, drums and harp with guest vocalists and violinists. It is an Eclectic mix of instrumentation, vocals and mixed recordings heavily influenced by those soundtracks from classic television that remind him of happy times. He said he hopes someday to be able to raise the money to do a Christmas album as well as a Beatles album, which would include his own version of "Eleanor Rigby".

"You'll hear a lot of the Beatles influence in it, but mine is about six minutes long," he said.

These days, Peterson said his health doesn't really allow him to play on the streets anymore. He said he played at one Huskies game and one Sounders match last year but for the most part, he's doesn't feel it's the place for him to be.

"I can't perform on the street anymore," he said. "Being a street musician was not meant to be permanent. I want to perform on stage."

Besides, Peterson noted that the atmosphere on the city streets is not the same as it was more than forty years ago. Peterson's voice filled with emotion talking about his one-time rival who became something of a friend, Seattle's Tuba Man Edward McMichael, who died in 2008 after being assaulted on the Seattle streets where they both used to play their music.

"I don't want that to happen to me. I can't be on the streets no more," Peterson said.

On his rare trips back to visit Chehalis, Peterson said he no longer stops "at the radio station by the fairground" because none of his old friends are working there any longer. He said he likes to stop by city hall to look at building permits. He loves the Seattle city life, quoting freely the ages and number of stories of the buildings he can see from his apartment window. He said he is always hoping Chehalis will build more tall buildings like Seattle. Like his affinity for the sounds of classic television, Peterson also has a soft spot for older buildings such as the St. Helens Hotel and sadly recalled former downtown buildings that are now parking lots.

"Any time they tear down a building, a city loses its soul," he said.

Peterson's first-ever hometown concert will take place March 20 at McFiler's in downtown Chehalis. The free, all-ages concert was sponsored by the Lewis County Historical Museum, McFiler's and Chehalis Holiday Inn Express. Lewis County Historical Museum director Jason Mattson said he first met Peterson last summer when a friend brought him to town for a visit. Peterson visited the museum and Mattson said they talked a lot about downtown buildings and then Peterson played some songs on the player piano from the Playquato dance hall that is located at the museum. Mattson said he was surprised to learn Peterson had never performed in Chehalis and began looking into finding a venue for a local concert.

"It's pretty special and I think it's going to be a really neat show," Mattson said.

Peterson said the March 20 concert will be piano music only and he will play on that Playquato piano, which will be on loan from the museum for the night. It will include selections of some of his favorite music, including classic television and the Beatles, and also some of his own compositions.

"I try to do as many piano songs as possible," Peterson said. "I play a repertoire I have played many times in the past."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law is his own worst enemy. While my husband and I were dating, we visited his father regularly. Since our marriage, our visits have become less frequent. This is because my husband and I both have demanding jobs, and I am in school. We are BUSY trying to secure a stable life together.

My FIL has taken offense to this. He insists that the real reason we don't visit is because we are angry with him and hate him. We have tried explaining that it isn't so, but he refuses to believe us. He's convinced that he has somehow deeply offended us, and we are refusing to talk about it.

Unfortunately, he obsesses over this every time we DO visit and makes it awkward by guilt-tripping me and my husband, begging us to tell him what he did wrong. He also tries to prevent us from leaving when it's time to go by distracting us with conversation, refusing to see us out the door, and sometimes physically sitting in front of the car so we can't drive off. Neither my husband nor I look forward to visits anymore because they have become such a chore.

My FIL has issues with mental illness (which contribute to his behavior), but he refuses to get help. Worse, he has an elementary school-age child who believes everything he says. The child is convinced we hate and have abandoned them because of hearing my FIL talk. I am frustrated and sad for the child, but my words to my FIL fall on deaf ears. Do you have any advice? — DAUGHTER-IN-LAW IN THE SOUTH

DEAR D.I.L.: Frankly, I am surprised your FIL is not focusing his entire attention on the child who is living at home rather than obsessing about his adult son and you. The man appears to be not only disturbed but also irrational.

Because your husband has dealt with his father his entire life, take your cues from him. If your father-in-law is currently married (I assume he must be because he has a young child living with him), talking to his wife might help. She may be able to help counteract the damage that is being created with the child.

DEAR ABBY: My son is welcoming his first child at the age of 39, and I will be hosting a baby shower for him and his girlfriend. The problem is, I asked him for a list of attendees, and at the top of the list is someone my son and daughter were friends with since middle school. However, a few years ago, she interfered with my daughter's marriage and caused a lot of heartache, so my daughter cut all ties with her.

My son travels a lot. He is not home often and doesn't know the extent of what happened between my daughter and their mutual friend. I'm not sure how to handle this. Should I not invite her, or should I tell my son what happened and suggest he not invite her out of respect for his sister? Or do I tell my daughter this is about her brother, it's only one get-together, and she needs to respect her brother's wishes?

I'm in the middle and not sure what to do. At one time I was close with this girl, but after what she did to my daughter, I haven't spoken to her either. — GETTING ALONG IN THE EAST

DEAR GETTING ALONG: Your son may travel a lot, but he has a phone. Call him, fill him in and ask how he and his girlfriend want this handled. I'm betting he will tell you to scratch "Miss Troublemaker" off the list.

DEAR ABBY: On a recent Saturday afternoon, two of my daughter's 13-year-old friends came to our house. My daughter answered the door, and after being denied access, both pushed their way in.

During their stay, the girls were rude and disrespectful, going through the refrigerator and pantry and helping themselves to whatever they wished. My wife and daughter repeatedly asked them to leave, but the girls laughed and ignored the requests.

What do you suggest in an event such as this without getting physical, as my wife didn't have their parents' phone numbers? (I was away on a work trip during all of this.) — DISRESPECTED IN OUR HOME

DEAR DISRESPECTED: These are "friends"? Your wife should have done what anyone should do when unwanted intruders burst into one's home. She should have called the police, had the girls removed and filed a formal complaint. She should also have reported the incident to the school, gotten the parents' phone numbers and informed them about what occurred so it doesn't happen to her and your daughter or some other family again. And by the way, your daughter should be taught to never open the door unless she WANTS to let someone in.

DEAR ABBY: Fifty years ago, at the age of 17, I was raped by a high school classmate. At the time, I was living in an apartment with a friend, "Becky." She and three male classmates witnessed the attack, stood by and did nothing. (They were drunk.)

I never reported the assault because I was scared, embarrassed and ashamed. No one ever spoke about it, and Becky and I went our separate ways. I eventually married, moved away from my hometown and tried to put the incident behind me.

Fifteen years ago, I moved back and married a local man. I see all those people frequently around town, which reminds me of that terrible night. I don't think it's fair that I have had to live with this for 50 years while the others appear to have forgotten and gone on their merry way. None of them ever apologized or acknowledged their part in the attack. I remember it as vividly as if it were last week.

I would like to confront those involved. A friend suggested I privately confront my attacker. I believe calling out these people will give me peace of mind. My husband and I are planning to move out of the area, so I will never have to see any of them again. Should I confront all of them or just my attacker? Or should I let sleeping dogs lie? — ASSAULTED IN IDAHO

DEAR ASSAULTED: Before deciding whether to confront these people after 50 years or let sleeping dogs lie, what I think you should do is discuss what happened with a licensed therapist, specifically one who works with patients who have PTSD. Whereas a half-century ago there was a tendency to blame the victims of sexual assault, we have come a long way since then, and help is available for you if you're willing to get it.

A way to find help in making this important decision would be to contact RAINN (rainn.org). The toll-free phone number is 800-656-4673. RAINN is the free, confidential national sexual assault hotline, and it's available 24/7.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a beautiful 77-year-old woman in excellent health who has fun traveling internationally. I will soon be taking my oldest daughter to Europe at my expense because I want a companion.

I'm 19 years older than she is. She also is in great health and has a fun-loving personality. We look like sisters and have fun together wherever we go. However, I don't want her to call me "Mom" while we are out in public places. Can I ask her not to call me that?

She is stubborn and always has been, but I love her and want her around while I'm traveling, rather than friends. She's single, but I'm not. My husband can't go because of health issues.

I need my daughter to go with me. Can you give me some ideas on how to approach her to not call me "Mom" in public? What if she refuses to go with me? — ONE STIPULATION IN THE SOUTH

DEAR STIPULATION: I can't help but wonder why not being called "Mom" is so important to you. I have read your letter several times, and I'm struck by the fact that it's all about YOU and what YOU want. Your daughter is long past 21, and I'm sure she can make her own decisions. You can ask her not to call you "Mom," but whether she will agree and won't forget to not address you that way is anyone's guess. Old habits die hard.

DEAR ABBY: I am a gay woman. My male best friend has had a crush on me for more than a year. It is so intense that he is almost delusional. We have talked extensively about it. He knows where I stand and that it will never happen, and he says he accepts that. But he can't stand the thought of me spending time with a woman, even if it's just a friend. He wants all of my time and doesn't want to share me, even with mutual friends.

Here's the kicker: I had invited him to move back to my college town with me. We both thought that moving to a big city would open up more dating opportunities for us and help him get over me. It was an ordeal for him, but he put in a ton of work to be able to move. We planned to be housemates. This happened during a time when we thought he was feeling more resolved about our relationship.

We have been staying with my relative while we search for a house in the big city, so we are trapped in the same space, and he has nowhere else to go. Since moving in together, his feelings for me have resurged. I no longer want to be roommates because of his possessiveness. But it would devastate him if I left him alone here, especially since it was my idea to go, and I was meant to be his support system. I feel like I am trapped in his drama and cannot live my life without ruining his. Please help! — TRAPPED LESBIAN IN THE WEST

DEAR TRAPPED LESBIAN: Do not rent an apartment with him or buy a house! To do so would be an expensive mistake. You cannot fulfill his needs. If you allow this to continue, he will destroy every opportunity that comes your way because it will be a threat to his fantasy.

He needs to find other living arrangements NOW, and you and your relative should insist upon it. This is not going to have a fairy-tale ending, and you probably will not remain friends as you move along with your life. But move along is what you must do, for both your sakes.

Meet the dads

NBC explores life after a loved one's death in 'Council of Dads'

By Rachel Jones
TV Media

Who would you trust to raise your kids after you're gone? It's a question no one ever wants to think about, but NBC's newest family drama reminds us that, sometimes, life doesn't go as planned. "Council of Dads" bravely covers the emotional journey of a family dealing with the death of its patriarch when it premieres Tuesday, March 10, on NBC.

The show's drama is kick-started when a loving father named Scott Perry (Tom Everett Scott, "13 Reasons Why") learns that he has cancer. Naturally, he begins to put some serious thought into his family's future – who will help his wife, Robin (Sarah Wayne Callies, "The Walking Dead"), care for their four children after he's gone?

He evaluates his friends, wondering who he could ask to help support and guide the children through life's challenges in his place. Ultimately, he realizes that no one man has all the qualities he's looking for: he needs a team.

Scott forms what he calls a "council of dads" with three friends he asks to share the responsibility of looking after his kids after he's gone. He picks his oldest friend, Anthony Lavelle (Clive Standen, "Vikings"), along with Larry Mills (Michael O'Neill, "Dallas Buyers Club," 2013), who sponsored him in AA, and Dr. Oliver Post (J. August Richards, "Angel"), one of his own physicians. Interestingly, Post is both his surgeon and Robin's closest friend.

Scott believes that these replacement dads collectively have the skills to stand in for him as his children – Charlotte (Thalia Tran, "Little," 2019), Theo (Emjay Anthony, "Rake"), JJ (Blue Chapman, "Undone") and Luly (Michele Weaver, "Love Is _") – grow up.

This new show is based on the 2010 New York Times bestseller "The Council of Dads: My Daughters, My Illness, and the Men Who Could Be Me," by Bruce Feiler, who wrote the novel after his own cancer scare inspired him to form a similar council. While, thankfully, Feiler survived, it is apparent from NBC's emotional trailer that Scott Perry's character does not.

After producing hit shows such as "Parenthood," "Friday Night Lights" and "This Is Us," NBC has a proven track record when it comes to family drama. "Council Of Dads" has the potential to join these ranks and should prove just as magnetic as its predecessors. The series will cover some of the biggest milestones a family can experience: new babies, weddings, first loves and, of course, death. But it also seeks to examine the small, essential moments that pepper each of our lives and the many complexities of working through grief.

No matter how expected it is, dealing with death can put any family into survival mode. The Perry kids vary in age, gender and even race – each has vastly different needs and challenges, and though they have an extremely loving and capable mother in Robin, the presence of this "council" in their lives could make an enormous difference.

Along with expected emotional scenes, the show offers some humor and lightheartedness. After all, you think it's tough for a teenager to to deal with one dad? Try having three! And it's not just the kids who struggle. The surly Larry Mills, for example, has a difficult time relating to children, and all three men wonder from time to time why they were chosen for such an important task. As the Perry kids try to find joy and happiness despite their struggles and losses, we get to witness the love and loyalty that these men have for their friend as they step up in ways they didn't even know they were capable of. It's an inspiring series, and it makes it clear that strong families aren't always born, they can be built.

This isn't the first time that someone has attempted to produce Feiler's book for television. In 2011, "Council of Dads" premiered on Fox as a 30-minute TV special starring Kyle Bornheimer ("Marriage Story", 2019). It's no surprise that such a short time frame couldn't adequately capture the power behind Feiler's ordeal. It's safe to assume that NBC's version will be far more successful in communicating the sensitive but important message that the show preaches: you don't have to be family to be a family.

Thalia Tran as seen in "Council of Dads"

The writers of "Council of Dads" are Tony Phelan and Joan Rater of "Grey's Anatomy," which means they know a thing or two about tugging at our heartstrings. Producers and executive producers include the writers themselves, plus the legendary Jerry Bruckheimer of "CSI" fame – a decent pedigree for a brand-new series. For the first three weeks, the show will follow "This Is Us" at 10 p.m. on Tuesday nights, before moving to the 9 p.m. time-slot on Tuesday, March 31. The show also streams the next day on nbc.com.

There's a good chance you'll need a whole box of tissues for this one, but it will definitely be worth it. Check out "Council of Dads" when it premieres Tuesday, March 10, on NBC.

Sonoya Mizuno and Nick Offerman in "Devs"

By Jessica Gosse
TV Media

"Devs"

From the mind of Alex Garland ("Ex Machina") comes this thrilling futuristic series, premiering Thursday, March 5. Sonoya Mizuno ("Maniac") stars as Lily, a computer engineer working at Amaya Corporation with her boyfriend. When her boyfriend suddenly dies, Lily is distraught and begins to believe that the police are wrong about his death being a suicide. Desperate to find an answer, she begins to suspect that he was murdered and that the company's CEO, Forest (Nick Offerman, "Parks and Recreation"), knows more than he will admit. As she delves deeper into her investigation, she realizes that all roads lead back to the Amaya Corporation's secret development division — or "Devs" — and uncovers a global conspiracy. A new episode of this addictive miniseries premieres every Thursday.

"Hillary"

On Friday, March 6, learn the full story of the former first lady and presidential candidate in this four-part documentary. Hillary Rodham Clinton opens up and discusses her life from her college years and her marriage to former U.S. president Bill Clinton to her work for women's rights and her campaign for president. Director Nanette Burstein ("Going the Distance," 2010) had concerns that Clinton would shy away from any controversy, but she was happily mistaken when her subject spent 35 hours answering questions and discussing any and all topics that came up, including her husband's infamous affair with Monica Lewinsky, her relationships with Bernie Sanders and current president Donald Trump, and the fateful night in 2016 when she failed to win the presidency. The series not only includes interviews with Hillary and Bill Clinton, it also includes behind-the-scenes footage from Hillary's presidential campaign. Don't miss this fascinating docuseries that looks into a substantial figure in American history.

"Free Willy" (1993)

Don't miss this classic heart-felt tale of friendship when it comes to Hulu on Sunday, March 1. Jason James Richter ("The Brawler," 2018) stars as Jesse, a 12-year-old boy who has led a difficult life since being abandoned by his mother at the age of 6. When he is picked up by the police for stealing food and vandalizing a theme park, Jesse makes a deal with his social worker, Dwight (Mykelti Williamson, "Chicago P.D."), and agrees to clean the park under the terms of his probation. While working there, he meets Willy, an orca the park owner Dial (Michael Ironside, "Starship Troopers," 1997) wants to train. As Jesse bonds with Willy, Dial decides to use their friendship to his advantage and have Jesse host "The Willy Show," but his plan goes awry when Willy refuses to perform. Realizing that the orca is costing him money instead of raking it in for him, Dial comes up with a plan to get rid of the whale: he causes a leak in Willy's tank in order to "accidentally" kill him and collect the insurance money. But Jesse has a plan of his own: he races against time to release Willy back into the ocean to be with his family.

"The Men Who Stare at Goats" (2009)

Ewan McGregor ("Doctor Sleep," 2019) stars as investigative journalist Bob Wilton in this satire that joins the lineup on Thursday, March 4. When Wilton's wife leaves him for his editor, he heads to Kuwait to write a story on the Iraq War, but the story he discovers is not what he expects. Lyn Cassidy (George Clooney, "Hail, Caesar!," 2016) is a retired special forces operator who, upon meeting Wilton, tells him he is a "Jedi warrior," and that he was part of an army unit in the 1980s known as the New Earth Army that trained psychic spies. As Cassidy heads off on a "mission" to find the unit's founder, Bill Django (Jeff Bridges, "Only the Brave," 2017), Wilton convinces him to bring the writer along so he can record Cassidy's crazy story. Wilton becomes increasingly convinced that Cassidy is simply insane as they encounter all sorts of struggles along the way. Things get complicated when they find out that Cassidy's rival, Larry Hooper (Kevin Spacey, "House of Cards"), who used LSD to try and make himself better than Cassidy, is running a psychic research firm where a now-depressed and alcoholic Django is an employee. Catch this hilarious and weird story when it joins the lineup this Thursday.

Fantastic Four

AMC 8:00 p.m.

When Reed Richards (Ioan Gruffudd) and his colleagues are hit by cosmic rays while working on a space station, they develop superhuman abilities in this comic based film. Jessica Alba and Chris Evans also star as siblings Sue and Johnny Storm.

John Wick

USA 9:00 p.m.

Keanu Reeves stars as the eponymous ex-hitman in this visually-stunning film that spawned a franchise. After waking up to find Russian mobsters killed the most important thing in his life – his dog – Wick comes out of retirement to get his revenge.

Donnie Wahlberg in "Blue Bloods"

The Trade

SHOW 9:00 p.m.

Don't miss the Season 2 premiere of this raw docuseries. Magda fears for her life after her husband is killed by MS-13, so she and her daughter flee to Honduras with hopes of getting to the U.S., where Special Agent Ramirez leads Homeland Security.

Blue Bloods

KIRO 10:00 p.m.

Harvard Law graduate Jamie Reagan (Will Estes) opted out of a lucrative career in law to become a police officer in this drama. The series revolves around a multi-generational family of cops and lawyers featuring stars Tom Selleck and Donnie Wahlberg.

Dane DeHaan in "ZeroZeroZero"

By Jessica Gosse
TV Media

"ZeroZeroZero"

Take an inside look at the intense world of cocaine trafficking in this eight-part series, premiering Friday, March 6. The series looks at the political and economic impact of drug trafficking and the ever-shifting dynamic between various crime organizations, from Mexican cartels to the Calabrian mafia. Based on the Italian book by the bold essayist and screenwriter Roberto Saviano, the series also looks at the familial impact of organized crime and stars Andrea Riseborough ("Birdman," 2014) and Dane DeHaan ("The Amazing Spider-Man 2," 2014) as the children of an Italian business man (Gabriel Byrne, "In Treatment") whose business is dependent on brokering cocaine.

"Patrick Melrose" Season 1

This black comedy didn't get nearly enough attention when it aired on Showtime in 2018, but you will finally get be able to binge it when it starts streaming on Sunday, March 1. Benedict Cumberbatch produced and stars in the series as the titular Patrick Melrose, a rich Englishman trying to outrun his demons. We meet Patrick in 1982, just after the death of his father. It becomes increasingly clear that their father-son relationship was fraught with abuse and neglect, and Patrick's drug abuse and dangerous lifestyle is tied to his childhood trauma. Themes of addiction, abuse and suicide are explored, but if that sounds too heavy for you, fear not — I did mention this was a black comedy, and somehow, this series manages to strike just the right balance of humor and heaviness. Cumberbatch is phenomenal as the troubled title character, and as he leads us through more than two decades of the character's life, it's hard not to get attached, despite Patrick's consistently terrible life choices. Jennifer Jason Leigh ("Atypical") turns in a great performance as Patrick's mother, and the always-impressive Hugo Weaving ("V for Vendetta," 2005) plays his abusive dad in frequent flashbacks. The remaining cast may be lesser-known, but they shine just the same: Prasanna Puwanarajah ("Defending the Guilty"), Anna Madeley ("Silent Witness"), Jessica Raine ("The Last Post") and talented newcomer Sebastian Maltz make up the rest of the ensemble. It's a story that will stick with you, and if you find yourself drawn to Patrick, you'll be happy to hear that he's also the central character of a series of semi-autobiographical novels by Edward St. Aubyn. They served as the basis for this TV series.

Dana Carvey, Mike Myers and Tia Carrere in "Wayne's World 2"

Benedict Cumberbatch stars in "Patrick Melrose"

"Wayne's World 2" (1993)

"Saturday Night Live" alumni Mike Myers and Dana Carvey star as Wayne Campbell and Garth Algar in the second installment of this film franchise that was derived from a popular sketch on the long-running live comedy series. Starting Sunday, March 1, you can stream this comedy gem that will whisk you back in time to the early 1990s, when Aerosmith was all the rage and people still watched cable access television. Wayne and Garth now host their show from an abandoned factory (instead of Wayne's parents' basement). After a concert, Jim Morrison (Michael A. Nickles, "Silk Stalkings") appears to Wayne in a vision and convinces him that it's his destiny to put on a major music festival. The journey to "Waynestock" is a rocky one, and as personal problems plague the dudes, it seems as if the whole endeavor will fall apart. This film is stacked with notable cameos, including the members of "Aerosmith," Kim Basinger ("L.A. Confidential," 1997), Chris Farley ("Tommy Boy," 1995), Ed O'Neill ("Modern Family"), Jay Leno ("The Tonight Show With Jay Leno"), Heather Locklear ("Melrose Place"), Drew Barrymore ("Santa Clarita Diet") and Charlton Heston ("Ben-Hur," 1959). Now's the time to dive back into Wayne and Garth's hilarious lives — party on!

American Idol

KOMO 8:00 p.m.

The auditions continue in a new episode of this singing competition's 18th season. Ryan Seacrest hosts as singers begin the journey to determine who will take Laine Hardy's place as the reigning champion. Katy Perry, Luke Bryan and Lionel Richie judge.

Little Big Shots

KING 8:00 p.m.

Young performers take the stage to show off their unique talents in a new season of this variety series. Melissa McCarthy hosts the show which features everything from singers and dancers to young experts in astronomy, mathematics and archaeology.

Ben Mendelsohn and Cynthia Erivo in a scene from "The Outsider"

The Outsider

HBO 9:00 p.m.

The group enters into a climactic showdown in a last-ditch effort to finally root out the child-killing El Coco in the thrilling finale of this mystery series based on the Stephen King novel. Yul Vazquez, Ben Mendelsohn and Cynthia Erivo star.

Family Guy

KCPQ 9:30 p.m.

In this new episode, Peter accidentally becomes the new face of racial justice when, while coaching a minor league baseball team, a bout of constipation forces him to kneel during the national anthem. Dan Castellaneta lends his voice as a guest star.

"Spenser Confidential"

On Friday, March 6, don't miss the premiere of this cop-comedy based on the novel "Robert B. Parker's Wonderland," by Ace Atkins. Mark Wahlberg ("Daddy's Home," 2015) stars as Spenser, an ex-cop who spent the last five years in prison after being framed. Now free but unable to rejoin the police force, Spenser moves in with his former boxing coach, Henry (Alan Arkin, "The Kominsky Method"), who is happy to take him in, on one condition: he has to share a room with and help train Henry's newest boxer, a cocky MMA fighter named Hawk (Winston Duke, "Us," 2019). When two of his former co-workers are murdered, Spenser convinces his eccentric ex-girlfriend, Cissy (Iliza Shlesinger, "Instant Family," 2018), and his new roommate to help him investigate and take down the corrupt cops and politicians who killed his friends and framed him. Don't miss this action-packed comedy that features rapper Post Malone's first on-screen film role.

"Castlevania" Season 3

Based on the popular video game series, "Castlevania" returns to Netflix for a third season, premiering Thursday, March 5. The animated series is a medieval fantasy that puts a new twist on the classic tale of Dracula. When his wife is falsely accused of witchcraft and subsequently burned at the stake, Dracula (voiced by Graham McTavish, "Preacher") vows to destroy all humanity, believing them to be a stain on the Earth. Now, the fate of humanity rests in the hands of Trevor Belmont (voiced by Richard Armitage, "The Stranger"), a disgraced monster hunter. Season 2 saw Belmont team up with unlikely allies Sypha Belnades (voiced by Alejandra Reynoso, "Winx Club"), a powerful magic user, and Adrian aka Alucard (voice of James Callis, "Battlestar Galactica"), Dracula's son, who believes his father should be attacking the person responsible for his mother's death as opposed to all of humanity. After the dramatic Season 2 finale, Season 3 could go anywhere when it premieres this Thursday.

"Ugly Delicious" Season 2

Famous chef David Chang returns for the sophomore season of his hit Netflix series on Friday, March 6. It's been two and a half years since the first season premiered, and fans of Chang and his unique show have been eager to see where he'll go and what he'll eat next. Most food-related series focus not only on the flavor, but also on the presentation of the plate — not Chang. He is on a quest to understand people, and what says more about a culture than its comfort food? As Chang travels the world he (and his friends) try a wide array of food, some more ugly than delicious, and others too delicious to be ugly. He really delves into the origins and ingredients of the food, exploring how and why the food relates to its region, and how it has evolved over time. It's a far more in-depth look at food than any other culinary series offers, and Chan's excitement about the history and attitudes attached to each dish is contagious. No word yet on which celebrity friends will be joining him this season, but Season 1 featured the likes of Aziz Ansari ("Master of None"), Steven Yeun ("The Walking Dead"), Gillian Jacobs ("Community") and Jimmy Kimmel ("Jimmy Kimmel Live!"), so you can expect at least a few familiar faces. If you haven't started this series yet, you can binge the first season now, and follow that up with the new episodes when they premiere on Friday.

hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison

Q: On the Season 39 finale of "Survivor," they seemed to be showing clips from the upcoming 40th season. How is that possible?

A: It's a sort of open secret with reality shows like "Survivor" that the seasons are – and indeed have to be – taped ahead of time. That's one of the things that make the live reunion episodes so special.

People can argue about just how real these reality shows are, but there's no denying that the footage they record needs to be edited. That alone introduces a time lag. Add that to the fact that the show airs weekly but the contestants don't get to rest during the intervening six days, and you start to realize how far we're getting from real time.

Seasons are typically recorded months in advance. The episode you refer to in your question, which aired on Dec. 18, was the final episode of a season that was recorded the previous March.

But the finales are usually followed by reunion specials, also hosted by Jeff Probst, of course, and those are actually not recorded in advance. The episode you watched was literally recorded that day (they're often live, but this one was pre-recorded). That's what makes it a "reunion" – the season's contestants actually hadn't been together in the jungle for months.

Q: I just rewatched "When Harry Met Sally" for the umpteenth time and it just occurred to me: Are those real couples telling their relationship stories throughout?

A: How about this: They're real stories, but those aren't real people. They're actors. (Sorry, actors – we kid because we love.)

Depending who you ask, the idea for including real romance stories in the now-classic 1989 romcom "When Harry Met Sally" came either from director Rob Reiner or writer Nora Ephron. It almost doesn't matter, because the two were such close friends that they basically wrote it together in a series of conversations over years.

Either way, in practice the stories came from a series of interviews that Ephron conducted with real people she knew. The point was to sneak some real, everyday emotion into the film.

The problem was, of course, real people aren't great at showing real emotion on camera. After a few screen tests, Reiner decided to get actors to tell the stories instead.

He also had to do a bit of scripting. Real people also aren't generally snappy storytellers – they ramble. These little vignettes were supposed to be quick breaks between the action of the film, but they weren't so quick when the real people told them, so Reiner and Ephron had to write the actual dialogue themselves.
